I've been interviewing recruiting professionals for an article on the top resume mistakes made by job seekers. Surprise, surprise- typos lead the list of pet peeves. In fact, one error on your resume can send it directly to the circular file without even landing in resume purgatory for a possible second look.

Job seekers: It's time to take back your power. You know you can do the job, so stop taking yourselves out of the running by making silly mistakes on your resumes. If there can be a National Squirrel Appreciation Day, then surely there can be a National Resume Day. I declare this day April 13- by then, those pesky New Year's resolutions will have waned and there will be more time to focus on perfecting your resumes.

Of course, you can start proofreading your resume now, which is a good idea if you're in an active job search. Whatever you do, don't rely on spellcheck- it doesn't catch everything.

If you doubt your resume writing or proofreading abilities, enlist the help of a professional.
